

“Anthroposophy opens its wellsprings, and the human will, carried by love, may draw from the waters. It brings to life love for humankind and thereby works creatively in impulses for moral action and true social interaction.”

— Rudolf Steiner

The Anthroposophical Society in America is a membership organization devoted to furthering Rudolf Steiner's work and the anthroposophical movement in the United States. Society members come together to study, to share their quest for meaning, their insights and their aspirations.

“People must come closer to one another than they used to do, each becoming an awakener of everyone he or she meets.” — R. Steiner

The Society is non-profit and non-sectarian. It serves members and the movement by facilitating a mutual awakening, in which new social forms can take root and grow. We do this through our highly regarded magazine being human, the Rudolf Steiner Library, the Anthroposophical Prison Outreach program, and a variety of opportunities for learning, connecting and sharing the possibilities of our time.

Benefits of membership include:

- Connecting with others to help anthroposophy grow in the world
- The print edition of being human, our quarterly magazine about initiatives, arts, ideas, and research from around the country
- Membership in the General Anthroposophical Society, the global community founded by Steiner and based at the Goetheanum in Switzerland
- Borrowing and research privileges at the Rudolf Steiner Library, the Society's national lending library and archive
- Discounts on the Society's annual conference, webinars, programs and store items
- After two years of Society membership, eligibility to join the School for Spiritual Science, the esoteric school founded by Rudolf Steiner

Are there requirements for joining? Only that you value Rudolf Steiner's work in the world.

WELCOME! We look forward to meeting you!

Anthroposophy is a source of spiritual knowledge and a practice of inner development. It cultivates our capacity to embrace the full dimensions of human experience, and the world in which we live, work and create. It is the inspiration for a wide variety of practical work including Waldorf education, biodynamic farming, medicine, arts, finance, social change and therapeutic approaches for people with disabilities.

Our world needs anthroposophy. In a time of cultural conflict, environmental destruction and widespread personal distress, anthroposophy offers deep insight and practical solutions.

MEMBERS

Our members are all around the country. They are young and old, with a wide variety of experiences and interests. There are groups and branches of the Society in most states, and members often take part in local or online study and conversation groups. Our members are also active in schools, farms, therapeutic groups, arts, and social initiatives of all kinds. The Society, based in Ann Arbor, MI is one of more than 70 national societies throughout the world.
